This transition guide serves to outline the updates and new content found in Public Health Nursing: Practicing Population-Based Care, Third Edition.

SUMMARY

Public Health Nursing: Practicing Population-Based Care, Third Edition is a comprehensive resource for students and faculty interested in public health nursing and education. The text takes a historical perspective in covering the challenges of public health nursing and offers evidence for why things are done the way they are. The authors accomplish this by providing a world view of various types of clinical experiences and by encouraging a conversation around how to invite the population to be active and engaged in the initiatives which promote public health.

NEW CHAPTERS:

- Chapter 10: Social Justice and the Ethics of Public Health Practice
- Chapter 18: Present-Day Disasters and Disaster Management: Social Determinants of Health and Community Collaboration
- Chapter 19: Environment and Health

NEW AUTHORS:

- Chapter 5: Educating Public Health Nurses to Do the Work: Judith Quaranta, Fran Srnka-Debnar, and Shai Lev
- Chapter 7: Informatics in Public Health Nursing: Arlene H. Morris
- Chapter 14: Working Together: Esther Thatcher, Eunhee Park, and Pamela Kulbok
- Chapter 15: Getting the Word Out: Susan Moscou and Nancy Murphy
